

From Crisis to Purpose . . .

“Mid-life can be the most productive—or destructive—years of your life.”¹

Midlife can be a time of self-doubt and disappointments that can lead to irrational thinking, impetuous purchases, and irresponsible relationships.

But this crisis can also be an immensely productive time as well, a time when people refocus their priorities and exchange old desires with new dreams. During this time of crisis you can come into a deeper knowledge of who you are and what your relationship with God can be.

In fact, a midlife crisis may be a God-produced event designed to shake you out of your comfort zone so that you might achieve the highest purpose for which you were created.

*“Let us not grow weary of doing good,
for in due season we will reap,
if we do not give up.”
(Galatians 6:9)*

Q: “How can a husband and a wife help each other in a difficult midlife crisis?”

- Put romance back into your marriage.
- Consider a rather unusual passage to relate to a marriage, but one that can be applied to your relationship.

*“I have this against you, that you have abandoned the love you had at first. Remember therefore from where you have fallen; repent, and do the works you did at first. If not, I will come to you and remove your lampstand from its place, unless you repent.”
(Revelation 2:4–5)*

1. The Problem

- Have you “abandoned [emotionally] the love you had at first”? This does not necessarily refer to a physical leaving, but rather to the absence of a sense of connection, therefore, the absence of a sense of romance.

2. The Solution

- “Remember . . . from where you have fallen.” Remember what attracted you to each other in the first place. Those traits and attributes are still present, although covered up with the overlay of marital neglect.
- “Repent.” Change the direction of your relationship. Ask yourself, What are the things that are keeping us from intimacy? Schedules? Wrong priorities? Hurts? What? Identify those things and commit to change.
- “Do the works you did at first.” Spend time together. Be courteous to one another. Talk!

Midlife Crisis Checklist

“Our spirits are restless until they find their rest in God.”

—Saint Augustine

- I feel trapped in my circumstances.
- I wish I could disappear.
- I feel I am getting old too fast.
- I feel I've never had the chance to do what I really wanted to do.
- I feel like a failure.
- I feel unappreciated.
- I don't have any real purpose for living.
- I have grown spiritually numb to the Lord and the church.
- I daydream and fantasize.
- I have little interest in sex with my spouse.
- I am easily angered.
- I feel that now is my last chance for happiness.

“Even to your old age I am he, and to gray hairs I will carry you. I have made, and I will bear; I will carry and will save.”
(Isaiah 46:4)
